Long-term Speculation ■ Long-term gains in the world's most sensitive market—the metals—depend on several global macroeconomic indicators, as well as on local demand. A firm's involvement in the metal price is the only 100% certain market speculation—generally, only in a million, or "insurance"—but the investment being discussed is a solid asset, not a bet on the future.

The percentage of men in a population is termed the male population index. In Sweden, the official figures were 99.9 percent in 1987. The actual number is close to the United Kingdom and many European countries.

THE GOVERNMENT'S decision to allow the sale of the British Petroleum (BP) shares to the public is a prudent one. It is a decision that will help to reduce the government's debt and will also help to reduce the risk of a future crisis. The government has been in a difficult financial position for some time, and the sale of the BP shares is a necessary step to help it get back on its feet. The sale of the shares will also help to reduce the risk of a future crisis, as it will allow the government to raise the money it needs to pay its debts.

Gov't bucks multi-rate VAT scheme

By Alexander S. Bana

THE MANILA BUREAU OF INTERNAL REVENUE (BIR) has rejected a proposal to allow businesses to pay different rates of value-added tax (VAT) depending on their industry or the type of goods they sell.

The BIR said that such a move would be "inconsistent with the principle of equality before the law" and would create "a complex and costly system of administration." It also pointed out that the current VAT system is already "fair and equitable" and that any change would require "a comprehensive study and a corresponding amendment to the Tax Code."

The BIR's rejection of the proposal comes as the government seeks to increase revenue and improve the efficiency of its tax system. The current VAT system allows businesses to pay a standard rate of 12% on the value of their sales, with some exceptions for certain goods and services. The proposal being rejected would have allowed businesses to pay different rates based on their industry or the type of goods they sell, which could have led to a more complex and costly system of administration.

BIR urged to focus on plugging tax leaks

By Alexander S. Bana

THE MANILA BUREAU OF INTERNAL REVENUE (BIR) has been urged to focus on plugging tax leaks rather than pursuing a multi-rate VAT scheme. The BIR has been criticized for its handling of the proposal, with some arguing that it is "not doing enough to plug the leaks in the current system." They argue that the BIR should focus on improving its enforcement and collection efforts rather than pursuing a complex and costly change to the VAT system.

The BIR has responded by saying that it is "committed to improving the efficiency of its tax system" and that it is "currently studying the proposal." It also pointed out that the current VAT system is "fair and equitable" and that any change would require "a comprehensive study and a corresponding amendment to the Tax Code."

In with the old, out with the new

By Tony D.

WHILE the rest of the world makes up its mind whether to embrace or reject gay, lesbian and transgender people, the Philippines has been torn by the same debate for years. The country's religious and cultural values have been a major factor in the debate, with many people believing that the country's traditional values should be preserved.

But the debate is not just about religion. It is also about the country's future. Many people believe that the country's traditional values should be preserved, while others believe that the country should embrace modern values. The debate is a reflection of the country's cultural and religious diversity. The country's traditional values are rooted in a mix of indigenous, Spanish, and American influences. This mix has created a unique culture that is both traditional and modern.
